THE HOLIDAY

In London Has Little Effect On Our Market.

THERE WERE NO GOLD ORDERS

And No Special News—St. Paul Was the Notably Active Stock—Sterling Exchange Was a Little Lower On Gold Shipments.

Special to the Gazette.

New York, May 18.—To-day was holiday in London and some persons were disposed to think that in the absence of foreign selling the stock market this morning would continue to respond to the aggressive surprise of Saturday's bank statement. These optimists were doomed to disappointment. After an illusory strength at opening, prices sagged off until they were well below Saturday's closing figures. St. Paul was stronger than the rest in consequence of reported increase in earnings. As the day advanced the weakness grew more pronounced until by 3 o'clock the prices of active stocks had declined from 15 to 2 points from Saturday's closing. There was no special news. No orders for gold were reported, but it is understood considerable gold will go by Wednesday's steamers.

The bond market was dull and depressed. Notably weak features of the market were Oregon Improvement 2's, Atchison Income, Reading 4's, Kansas and Texas 2's and Wash. U. S. The market closed dull and featureless. Final prices were generally below Saturday's. In the afternoon sterling exchange was lower, owing to sales of bills against shipments of gold. Continental exchange was weak. Advances and declines for the day:

BOUYANCY.

THE CZAR ATTEMPTING TO NEGOTIATE A LOAN.

The Gold Export Will Not Be Fraught With a Serious Financial Struggle. Russia Satisfied With Gold.

New York, May 16.—The marked intrinsic buoyancy of the stock market continues to be held in check by the large special exports of specie; and hence it becomes important to know the cause and the probable duration of the gold outflow, and the bearing it should legitimately have upon confidence and the course of the local money market.

Primarily, the experts seem to have arisen from the urgencies of Russian finance. The czar has for some time sought to effect a large loan, first to provide for the payment of maturing loans, next to construct extensive lines of railroad, and also to enable him to construct immense military works in menace of Germany and Austria. The Rothschilds lately undertook to negotiate, but nearly on account of the czar's hot persecution of the Jews and partly it is supposed because there was good reason to suspect that the loan was also intended for continued wars with those who are in the Triple Alliance, the great bankers withdrew from the transaction. This was a hard blow to the credit, the prestige and the political ambitions of the czar, and whether in revenge or from financial necessity, does not exactly appear. Russia has since been drawing heavily upon $100,000,000 to $125,000,000 of deposits which somewhat hesitantly, she has been allowed to rest with the great banks and bankers of Europe. The consequent large and sudden drain upon the European stocks of gold, coming close upon the deep disturbance arising from the financial complications in South America, has caused continental banks to reap themselves for the loss by getting out from every possible corner and market. It has been especially directed towards the United States. The panic in Lisbon, the uneasiness at Madrid, and the alarm in Paris, during the past week, are illustrations of the way in which the causes are acting upon European banking interests. The trouble in those cities, however, seems to have been adjusted, and that fact has partially restored confidence. Nevertheless, the situation is still shrouded in uncertainty. There is an absence of information as to how far Russia may continue to draw upon her deposits in foreign banks; and hence as that point is not yet settled, caution and the desire to get gold must continue to be the order of the day at the European centers.

Whilst this uncertainty prevails, we must stand exposed to a continuance of the demand on New York for gold; and Thursday's significant advance of the Bank of England's rate of discount from 4 to 5 per cent was no doubt made with that end in view. It is not easy to determine what may be the present ability of Europe to draw upon this country. The recent large exports of gold have been due not only to heavy maturing obligations on account of special importations made in anticipation of the operation of the new tariff duties, but also to the remittance of foreign banking houses resting here for employment. How far the latter resource against cash remittances may have been already diminished, it is impossible to estimate; but even had it been exhausted, it is not supposable, there would still remain ways in which Europe could get gold from us through borrowing here, were the pressure urgent enough to justify the cost of such operations. At the moment, however, the symptoms indicate that Russia has probably satisfied at least her immediate requirements for gold, and therefore at the foreign financial centers shows a more settled feeling; so that the hope is permissible that we may have now seen the worst of the international financial crisis.

On one point we may quite safely be confident—that, in spite of the shallow prophecies about the loss of gold threatening serious danger from the operation of the new silver act, neither the gold already exported nor any further early amounts that may possibly follow, can be fraught with any more serious inconvenience than a temporary stringency in the local money market. Whatever may come of our silver currency, our stock of gold is now so large that at worst it would require years to bring about the depreciation of the current value of silver money now so hastily predicted; and, in the meantime, we shall have plenty of time to correct any errors of legislation that experience may prove we have made.

It does not seem to be sufficiently appreciated that, within recent years, a very important change has occurred in the distribution of gold, so far as respects the United States. Between the years of 1862 and 1877 inclusive, we made a net export of $851,000,000 of gold; whilst during the period 1878 to 1890, we made a net import of $180,000,000, there having been only three years within the last thirteen years when the export of that metal has exceeded the import. With such a large and progressive accumulation of this metal, it surely cannot be such an alarming circumstance that we have exported some thirty-two millions since the beginning of April, and especially when there is such a clear prospect that the next harvest will put us so largely in a creditor relation to Europe as to bring back to us a large portion of the cash remittances we are now making. During the week ending Saturday we shipped over $8,000,000 gold, making a total of over $41,000,000 since January 1.

Nevertheless, while there is no danger of any permanent depletion of our stock of gold, it is not impossible that further early shipments may so far deplete the resources of the banks as to impose more or less check upon speculative transactions; and, for that reason, I suggest to our friends a conservative course in respect to all such operations and the postponement of buying until the European prospect is clearer. In the meantime, the harvest prospects and the current good earnings of the railroads are improving the intrinsic value of stocks, insuring an active market, when these financial clouds have been dispelled.

A BODY SNATCHER'S WORK.

A Mexican Remains Found Near Abilene. They Had Been Taken From the Grave—Cause Unknown.

Special to the Gazette.

ABILENE, TEX., May 18.—Our quiet little city was thrown into a flurry of excitement on yesterday morning by the finding of the body of a dead Mexican badly decomposed, lying in the main road in the eastern suburbs of the city. Upon examination it was found that the body had, as was then thought, been roughly used, and the postmortem of violence were present and one arm was broken. It was thought by many that this was an atrocious crime committed some days before, and only until Saturday night, when the rain did the murder have an opportunity to dispose of his victim. When the coroner's jury was empaneled, however, many identified the body as that of a Mexican who had been interned in the cemetery on Friday of last week. The grave at the cemetery was then opened, and on going down a short way one of the cover boards were found and then another and a little further down the under shirt. On reaching the coffin it was found that the corpse had, sure enough, been resurrected and only the clothes of the corpse were left in the coffin. The body was at once buried. No one can understand the motives of this body snatcher as he dumped his nude prize in the city in a main road.

An Early Settler Gone.

MEGRITH, TEX., May 17.—Died this morning at his home at Rylie, this county, Rev. J. H. Cox, a minister of the Primitive Baptist church. He was one of the earliest settlers in Dallas county, having come to this county in 1842. He was a native of Virginia, and was one of the first to drive the first wagon into the city of Dallas. He was noted for his rugged honesty, and was intensely Democratic in his convictions. He was one of the old land marks.
